Although I am still not totally clear about my life goal, one long term goal in current scenario is to get wealth. Certainly, making money is one of big goals regardless of what I am going to do in the near future, because it influences almost every aspect of our life. Thus, It is one of the significant goals not just for me but for almost everyone.

In order to get money, what I have to do is I have to get the job currently. Since I am in my final year, I have the opportunity to get the placement now. Companies have come on campus, I am applying for them. The next few months are going to be in those procedures for placements.

The next big question is what after placement, what will I be doing, after getting the job. Currently, I am studying here, the degree will be completed till next year's April or May. After that I will be in the job. What exactly needs to be done after that. Will the life simply go on? Will there be nothing else to do that is worth doing apart from whatever I will be doing for the company which I will be joining in?

Certainly, life is a very complex phenomenon and simply doing just one thing does not really fulfill the requirements of life. Life is not a stagnant phenomenon instead it works on the basis of give and take. You can't restrict yourself just as a giver or a taker. Thus, certainly when I make money I will return some part of it to the everything around me which contributes to welfare of humanity as whole.

After getting job in a company the most significant thing will be not to lose the wealth created on worthless things. Wealth must be accumulated in order to produce something bigger in upcoming future.

It can be anything. It can be getting higher education after five or ten years of working in a company.

Upskilling myself is also one of the big goals coming in the way. So what I have to do when the possibility exists for many things to come in the way. Thus, becoming stronger in everything in life is very very important.
